PRIMROSE BEACH HOUSE

A middle aged couple looks to build an upscale vacation home of around 2000 square feet. The plat for the narrow waterfront lot in the panhandle of Florida's gulf coast may be accessed by land from the south and by the canal from the north side. The ground-up job must incorporate a modern aesthetic that hints toward International Style on the interior and exterior. The home must accommodate an indoor/outdoor lifestyle, and may be utilized as a retirement home in the future. In turn, universal design and aging in place play an important role in design decisions for this project. Finally, the couple is very concerned with their impact on the environment and their home's place in it and desire to incorporate green design where possible.

GREEN DESIGN ASPECTS

This home takes green design into account in many ways. For example, windows throughout the home are Hurricane Shield by Pella. This product blocks 100% of harmful UV rays, holds up against strong winds, and exceeds EnergyStar guidelines in energy efficiency. In addition, natural air circulates through the home by opening the front door and bottom section of the large window, along with the operable wall on the rear of the home. The balcony and screened in porch allow air to cool as it rushes off the bay and into the home, where it circulates fresh air throughout the interior. The Trespa Pura NFC, horizontal siding on the exterior contains up to 70% natural fibers and is sourced from sustainable forests. Other elements of the home that contribute to its sustainability are:

- Greywater system
- WaterSense certified fixtures
 - LED lighting
- Light exterior color, less heat gain
- Recycled glass countertops
 - Automatic light sensors
- Zero VOC, zero emissions, asthma and allergy friendly paint

FLETCHER KITCHEN

Thomas and Margaret Fletcher recently purchased a lakefront condominium in downtown Chicago. In turn, they desire to remodel the kitchen into an impressive, high-end space that is conducive to entertaining. The couple would like display space for art pieces collected on their trips, the most current technology, and space for caterers to prepare and serve meals as the Fletchers do not cook often. To ensure that dinner parties run smoothly, the couple requests space and appliances efficient for entertaining. Overall, the Fletchers wish to have a modernized kitchen design that will provide them with a space that functions well for both catered events and everyday life.

PATEL RESIDENCE

The Patel family is relocating to a condominium unit in Washington, DC. This lively and sleek design encompasses modern fixtures and furnishings, intense textural and visual variety, and a bright color scheme to relay a feeling of energy. The color scheme displays bright and warm hues of red, yellow, orange, and pink. These colors are stimulating and energizing. In addition, Indian inspired patterns are used throughout the space in throw pillows or artwork to reference Indian culture. Meanwhile, naturally inspired furniture pieces allude to the natural materials used in many homes in India. Also, modern pieces combine with the warm colors and natural materials and textures to create an aesthetic that reflects the young family's modern lifestyle. At the same time, gold is used throughout the space in hardware, fixtures, and décor, relating to the golds used in many Indian artifacts, statues, jewelry, and clothing. In all, this design creates a modern, accessible, and energetic experience that references India's culture.

The CBD Store

The design for The CBD Store, located in Panama City Beach, FL, centered around sleek and modern simplicity. High contrast gave the space a sophisticated look. A two-way mirror gave the employee in the back office a view to the retail space without distracting from the design. Glass shelving displayed the products, while cabinet storage kept the real products safe. The mounted TV provided vital information for customers to review while they shop, and testimonials and research are framed for quick reference.

BRIDGE is an advertising agency located in a new high-rise building in Chicago, Illinois. The five-year-old firm began with only the president and her cousin, the vice president, and two others. Now it has grown and become very popular. Therefore, the company aims to both encourage current clients and attract new ones by creating a notable design. In addition, they would like to embed their core values of positivity, transparency, relationships, and creativity into the space.

FIRST FLOOR RETAIL SPACE

HERA

HERA, a high end retailer relocating to Toronto, Canada, will occupy two floors for the use of retail space, lounge areas, restrooms, and more. The design for HERA fuses a modern aesthetic with classicism. Inspired from the goddess of marriage, Hera, a pomegranate logo and millennial pink join to create an elegant and warm atmosphere. Columns made from iron rods and stretched fabric add interest to the space, and serve as a interchangeable design aspect. Marble references classical architecture and high tech security cameras and a memory mirror bring the design into this century.
